

Be part of the Birmingham Matrix

WOLF NKOLE HELZLE 2016_05

For the fifth time, participants of the international net art project I AM WE_interactive image meet in person. After Stuttgart, Izmir, Turku and Luxembourg this year in Birmingham, where Iris Bertz invited us.

What an interesting city in the heart of England with a decades-old multicultural population. This city and its people, we want to meet, interact in various ways with them and get a picture, which is composed of many individual images:

The Birmingham matrix.

To make this possible, we have put together an interesting program, supported by the City University of Birmingham, the Impact HUB, the Digital Humanities HUB, the Chinese community, with Ben Waddington and his wonderful „Still Walking“, the director of arts at CERN, the Ravidassia community and others. But now thanks to all those involved, especially at Iris, Justus and Ben.
